

Bristol Nutrition Biomedical Research Unit Affiliate

Dr Amit Bahl

Amit Bahl is Clinical Director for Bristol Haematology and Oncology Centre. He is a consultant clinical oncologist with expertise in urological and breast cancer management. He has led and developed the prostate brachytherapy service at BHOC. He has been an expert adviser to NICE for the technology appraisal on new drugs and an external service reviewer at oncology departments elsewhere in the country. Prior to his current roles, Dr Bahl became Member of the Royal College of Physicians (UK) and trained in Clinical Oncology, achieving the Fellowship of the Royal College of Radiologists qualification. He has been awarded the fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians. He is a current member of the National Cancer Research Institute Clinical Studies Groups for prostate, bladder and penile cancer, college tutor of the Royal College of Radiologists and executive committee member of British Uro-Oncology Group. He has supervised several MD research projects in breast and prostate cancer. In 2012 he was awarded the Cochrane Shanks Jalil Travelling Professorship.

Consultant Clinical Oncologist, Clinical Director, Bristol Haematology & Oncology Centre, University Hospitals Bristol, UK