Dear parents and carers

We are expecting a number of independent reports and findings about services in the Bristol Royal Hospital for Children to be published in June.

It is important to us that, as a family using, or about to use, our services you have confidence in our services and access to all the reports and information that is published. We want to make sure that you know where to find further information and support if you have any questions or concerns. This letter includes some further information about the reports in question and details of how you can talk to us, your local clinicians, and independent support groups.

A full list of the reports we are expecting is provided here and on our website (http://www.uhbristol.nhs.uk/), and we will post the reports and our responses to them on our website as they are published. These include:

- An independent investigation into our management response to allegations about staff behaviours related to the death of a baby at Bristol Children’s Hospital in April 2015 – produced by Verita, an organisation that specialises in conducting independent investigations. In addition, the inquest into this baby's death is due to be heard in mid-June.

- An independent audit and review of the medical records of a sample of children who were in our care between January 2012 and December 2014 for surgical treatment for heart conditions they were born with. The review has been carried out by the Care Quality Commission, the health service’s national quality regulator.

- The Independent Review of children’s heart services in Bristol, led by Eleanor Grey QC, which was commissioned following complaints about our services by a number of families whose children we cared for between 2010 and 2014.

In addition to these reports, the Parliamentary Health Services Ombudsman has been reviewing two cases where children sadly died at our hospital. We will study all these reports in detail, with the clinical team and, we hope, with the help of families throughout the region, to ensure that we learn from the experience of the families involved.

We care deeply about providing the right care to every child and looking after and involving their families in the right way. We are very sorry that this has not been every family’s experience and that there has been reason to review our service in such detail. We do expect there to be things that we could have done differently, and recommendations for our hospital. We are determined to learn from the reports’ findings and work with our clinical teams, young people and families to continue to make improvements to our services.
Outcomes in our children’s heart service are routinely audited by the National Congenital Heart Disease Audit report. The most recent report was published in April 2016, using data from the 2015 calendar year. This showed that we had delivered good clinical results for children, despite the growing complexity of the conditions we treat. You can look at the report via their website:
http://www.ucl.ac.uk/nicor/audits/congenital/documents/annual-reports/NCHDA2012-15

You can also look at the following website for more information on the statistics and what they mean. This website has been developed by doctors and scientists involved in children’s heart services; it is independent of the NHS and the UK Department of Health.

Our services for children and young people were inspected in September 2014 by the Care Quality Commission and assessed as good overall. The full report can be viewed at http://www.cqc.org.uk/location/RA7C1

If you or your child have any questions and/or would like to talk further to us or your local teams, there are a number of options available to you:
